

CANADA'S HOME IDEA BOOK

TREND:
the buzz about
BEES

RENO&DECOR

perfect
PALETTES
FOR THE ENTIRE HOME

MUST-HAVE VENTING for every room
in your home

INTERNATIONAL DESIGN
influences
in the GTA

AUG/SEP 2015 $4.95

renoanddecor.com

What COLOUR
should you paint
your FRONT DOOR?

PRODUCT SHOWCASES: Paint, Wallpaper and Home Furnishings

IN THE PINK

BY SARAH ST. AMAND • PHOTOGRAPHY BY KELLY HORKOFF

Embracing the bold and bright side of the colour wheel!

In an era of Pinterest, design blogs and Instagram, at the onset of a design consultation, homeowners are often armed with a myriad of images and ideas about everything from coffered ceilings to sofa upholstery to colour palettes.

So it was a rare moment when homeowner Freda Hart presented me with only a few parameters for the redesign of her living room and breakfast nook. The primary mandate was COLOUR.

Hart's adoration of bold hues and disdain for beige became apparent as the design process got underway. The only challenge was to narrow down the colour preferences in order to develop one cohesive palette. Hart knows what she likes and what she doesn't and we were both on the same page.

THE LAY OF THE LAND

When someone is drawn to a colourful interior, you need a starting point, something to work from, whether it is a piece of art, an area carpet, or a fabric. It provides the direction to begin the process of choosing a colour palette.

By gathering a variety of patterns, fabrics and colours to show a homeowner, I can elicit an understanding of their likes or dislikes and ensure they are not making hasty decisions just to get the project completed. Because colour is subjective, people usually know instinctively if they like a colour or not.

In this case, Hart wanted to take her time to make final decisions. She put no parameters on a timeline for the room to be completed because it was more important for her that it was a room she would love. After several shopping excursions and consultations, a colour scheme emerged.

“BECAUSE COLOUR IS SUBJECTIVE, PEOPLE KNOW INSTINCTIVELY IF THEY LIKE A COLOUR OR NOT.”

In the way you wouldn't build an outfit around a pair of socks, instead selecting a beautiful scarf or a great piece of jewellery, the same goes for decor. If you start with something you love, you can build a palette from it and add the corresponding elements to make your home a reflection of your personality.

COLOUR PLUNGE

Hart's home had a beautiful floor plan and great bones but the interior was really a blank slate. Considering her love of colour, impact was important for her, while remaining tasteful at the same time.

Although the recent trend in design has been soft greys with neutrals and light surroundings, it was exciting to work with Hart because her love for colour was reflected in her personality. As a gentle backdrop to the colourful furnishings, artwork and fabrics, I opted to use Benjamin Moore's Chantilly Lace OC-65.

As we approached the end of the project, a pop of paint colour was added by pulling out the teal found in the canvas and the accent cushions on the sofa. Benjamin Moore's Avalon Teal CSP-645 did the trick.

In the breakfast nook, Benjamin Moore's Spa Day CSP-635 gave the all-white kitchen a dramatic uplift, which was exactly what Hart wanted.

FOR THE COLOUR-SHY

Toss pillows (and the occasional throw) are a favourite noncommittal way to add a variety of colours to a space. They're easy to mix and match and rearrange or replace at any time.

Bringing in some playful patterns is another way to add a sense of drama even where very little colour is actually present. Look to bold geometrics (like a chunky chevron or stripe), animal prints and bold wood grains to add visual variety without clashing.

Combining patterned pieces with those in a combination of neutral tones can create a space that suggests colour, but with very little colour at all.

Most clients are afraid of using too much colour because they worry they will tire of the decor, especially with more permanent pieces. In order to get a unique design, sometimes a designer has to help the homeowner to step out of the box.

NOTHING VENTURED, NOTHING GAINED

When I first brought Hart the hot pink chevron fabric for the chairs and suggested having the legs painted white, I thought for sure she would be hesitant to commit to such a bold choice. Although she had to keep the fabric book for several weeks to mull it over, she called me up one day and said, "Go for it, Sarah!" When the chairs arrived she was thrilled.

The designer's job is not only to bring the look together but to keep the project moving along and to manage all aspects so everything is cohesive. I enjoy the process because it also establishes a relationship with the homeowner.

Subsequently, Hart's family room became the next project we're working on together. Dubbed "The Hart Lounge," I know I will enjoy this design experience every step of the way. ♦

SOURCES: LIVING ROOM PAINT: benjaminmoore.com; CHEVRON CHAIRS AND SOFAS: Gresham House (trade only); COFFEE TABLE, LAMPS AND BUFFET CABINET: elte.com; ARTWORK: custom trade only supplier; AREA CARPET: Minster Interiors (trade only); ACCESSORIES: cobistyle.com, Canfloyd; FLOWERS: La Petite Fleur; petitefleur.com; KITCHEN LUCITE CHAIRS: ikea.com; TABLE: custom through Sarah St. Amand Interior Design

Designer Sarah St. Amand, principal/owner of GTA-based Sarah St. Amand Interior Design, specializes in residential and commercial design projects of all sizes and scope. She has made appearances on Citytv's CityLine and has gained national recognition for her design work. For more information, visit stamanddesign.com.

BY SARAH ST. AMANT

Laying Down THE RULES

Beyond style, type and budget, size is the most important factor to consider when purchasing an area rug

Many consumers make the mistake of selecting a carpet that is much too small for their space. As a designer, I remind clients that area rugs are meant to define a space, by way of placement and by the statement they make.

I often encounter clients who are skeptical of using an area carpet in their room, considering their investment in hardwood. However, in most cases, a vast space needs a rug to anchor the furniture arrangement and define a conversation area. Area carpets serve to provide a sense of warmth and comfort that a hard-surfaced floor, alone, cannot.

“If your table is round, consider having a piece of broadloom cut into a round area rug.”

SIZING IT UP

There are many important guidelines to consider when selecting the size for your area carpet. In a dining room, for example, it should be long and wide enough on all sides to allow for chairs to slide in and out easily. A good rule of thumb is approximately 24 to 30 inches, all the way around your table. For a standard dining table (42x64 inches) that seats four to six people, a rug measuring 8x10 feet is a good starting point.

When using an area rug in a dining room, it is always a good idea to consider the furniture arrangement in the room before determining the rug size. You should measure where the area rug will end so the rug does not get caught under the front of your server, sideboard or other pieces of furniture.

THINK OUTSIDE THE BOX

Custom is not always synonymous with expensive. I have assisted many clients who have been on the hunt for the perfect area rug, later to find that a piece of broadloom cut to size and serged, or bound with a decorative tape, has saved the day. This allows you to create an area carpet that fits your space perfectly, fitting the room's measurements and matching colour preferences with beautiful results. So think outside the box: If your table is round, consider having a piece of broadloom cut into a round area rug.

PROPER PLACEMENT

Living rooms present many issues when placing an area carpet. A common mistake I encounter when I first visit a client's home is seeing a lone coffee table sitting on an area carpet. In doing this, all attention is drawn to the coffee table rather than the entire furniture arrangement in the room.

For living rooms, the rug should be large enough to slide under the front legs of sofas and chairs in a seating arrangement, unifying the furniture. Alternatively, depending on the size of the room, it looks equally nice to have all the furniture placed on the area rug. A good guideline, is to allow approximately 9 to 12 inches of exposed floor between the rug edge and the perimeter walls of the room.

COLOUR COORDINATION

When decorating your home from scratch, a good tip is to buy your accent rug first, and then pull colours from it to use on the walls, furniture, pillows, and other decor. This approach will create a consistent colour scheme, bringing your whole room together. It is far easier to buy furniture and accessories to complement your rug than the other way around!

With some careful consideration of personal needs, precise measurements and an incorporation of personal tastes, everyone can find an area carpet that suits their style and needs. It will serve as a beautiful addition to any room.

the rug should be large enough to slide under the front legs of sofas and chairs in a seating arrangement

BOTTOM LEFT: ASCOT CARPET BY STANTON CARPET; AVAILABLE THROUGH DESIGNERS ACROSS CANADA

LARRY ARNAL PHOTOGRAPHY

“When decorating your home from scratch, a good tip is to buy your accent rug first, and then pull colours from it to use on the walls, furniture, pillows, and other decor.”